

FOR GT3 TEAMS & OWNER-DRIVERS · BY INVITATION

RACE WHERE WINNING PAYS

You run the fastest production-based race cars on earth in a category that pays almost nothing back. The GT Global Championship inverts it: $250,000 in cash on every round — $100,000 to win — and the top ten in each grid leave with a check. Nine rounds, seven countries, every weekend the championship's own exclusive circuit. GT3 is the apex class: invited teams, sixteen places a round, with a Bronze-rated gentleman driver in every crew, racing for the richest season fund GT racing has ever posted.

WHAT WINNING A GT RACE PAYS TODAY

SERIES	PUBLISHED CASH TO WIN A STANDARD RACE
IMSA — top GT class	~$10,000
GT World Challenge Europe	~€20,000
Ferrari Challenge / Super Trofeo	No published cash prize
Biggest claim in the category	$1M purse-and-prizes — for a full season
The GT Global Championship	$100,000 — every round

A season spent on the podium banks roughly $225,000. Every comparable series charges its competitors and pays nothing back — that inversion is the story every one of your sponsors gets to be part of.

BEYOND THE CHECK

- The whole circuit is ours. Every round is an exclusive three-day weekend — real track time, testing windows, no sharing the paddock with someone else's event.
- A world feed and a season documentary — a media program built to make the field famous, which is sponsor inventory your current series doesn't give you.
- Nine rounds, seven countries — USA (home: Road Atlanta), UK, Belgium, Japan, Australia, Brazil, Canada. A calendar your partners can activate on three continents.
- The gentleman driver, written into the rules. Every crew carries a Bronze-rated amateur, who qualifies the car and drives at least 1h45 of the six hours. The Bronze on GT3 pole is paid $5,000 at every round, by name.
- The nations engine fills the grandstands. GT4 is the nations class — countries represented, flags scored every round — built to hand every market a reason to watch the race you're winning.
- Founding-team status. Year zero is the only year the grid forms — founding teams set the standard and keep the story.

THE STRAIGHT ANSWERS

Is the money real? The purse is funded by the championship's capital program, escrowed per season, and paid per round — it does not depend on entry fees or ticket sales.

Who gets in? GT3 is by invitation: sixteen places a round, two cars a team, no more than four cars of one marque, and two places held at each round for a team from the host country.

What does it cost to enter? Founding-team entry terms are set in direct conversation — built to be a fraction of what the purse puts back on the table for a competitive season.

BoP? Balanced spec across the marques — Porsche, AMG, McLaren, Ferrari, Aston Martin — so the driver and the team decide the result.

When? The first green flag flies in 2027, at Road Atlanta. The founding grid is forming now.

Purse figures are the championship's published season design; competitor payout figures as publicly reported/published by the respective series, August 2026. Places are subject to each circuit's licence. An aspirational championship in development — only Road Atlanta is confirmed; all other circuits represent the ambition the calendar grows toward.
